LVO donates supplies to St. Luke's University Health Network

Lehigh Valley Operations (LVO) continues to support healthcare efforts in our local community through in-kind donations of much-needed personal protective equipment (PPE) items given to our local healthcare providers.

Earlier this week a nurse from St. Luke's University Health Care Network in the Lehigh Valley contacted LVO Plant Manager Rickard Lundberg to see if LVO had any available PPE supplies that could be donated. She decided to reach out to LVO, since her husband, son, and other relatives are employees of Mack Trucks.

St. Luke's was in need of goggles, face shields, safety glasses and other PPE items that are currently difficult to obtain from suppliers due to the high demand created by the COVID-19 outbreak.

Although LVO had recently donated a number of PPE items to another local healthcare services provider, Rickard wanted to make certain Mack Trucks was doing everything possible to help our local healthcare community. LVO was able to round up goggles, face shields, heavy nitrile gloves and safety glasses to donate to St. Luke's.

"In this time of critical need, we all need to step up and help our community in any way possible," noted Rickard.

We Are Mack. We Are Safety. We Are People.
