Send an e-mail to Corporate.Standards@volvo.com if the standards you are searching for is not available.

Material numbers

If you are searching for a material standard, please note that the material number is not the same as the standard number. Normally, both the standard number and the material number are indicated in the technical documentation provided by the purchasing department. If this is not the case, try to contact the purchasing department in question. If they cannot answer your questions, send an e-mail to Corporate.Standards@volvo.com and indicate which material number you are searching for and from which document the reference is made.

Calibration Instructions (KAL) documents

Enter the STD and KAL prefixes, for example STD KAL 610.10

ISO standards, EN standards, IEC standards, and other national or international standards

These standards have to be purchased from the standards organization issuing the standards, your national standards organization or a company specializing in selling these types of standards. See, for example, <http://www.wssn.net/WSSN/> for more information on national and international standardization.
